TELEPHONE CHARADES INSTRUCTIONS

Split into two groups. Group 1 blindly chooses 3 words (an object, an action, and a person) to act out to each other. Group 1 (of at least 3-4 people) gets their 3 cards and lets ONLY one person ("The Reader") read them. Group 1 goes and waits in the other room so they cannot hear anything. The Reader from Group 1 reads the words chosen in the following categories: object, action, person. They say nothing to their group about the words--in fact nothing is said by ANY of the team members during the game.

Someone from Group 2 goes into the other room and has a member of Group 1 ("Guesser 1") come out. Guesser 1 watches as The Reader acts out the object, action, and person that was chosen for them. Guesser 1, even if they do not know what The Reader was acting out, now acts out the object, action, and person to Guesser 2, who comes out of the room next. Guesser 2 watches as Guesser 1 acts out the object, action, and person. Guesser 3 is then retrieved from the room and Guesser 2 acts out the 3 cards to Guesser 3.

When the last person from Group 1 comes out of the room and watches the most recent guesser act out the object, action, and person, they are then required to guess, out loud, what they believe the 3 cards are. A point is given for each correct guess. Then, Group 2 would go out of the room and the Group 2 Reader would draw 3 cards for them to act out to each other and the game would continue over again as explained above!
