

WORDS

Circle or underline words in a book. Write the page numbers in the order you want them to find the words.

EXAMPLE:

First I circled a word or group of words on pages of the book, "JIP" by Katherine Paterson, then wrote the page numbers in the order I wanted him to find the words.

78, 38, 39, 40, 86, 87(3), 84

My Husband found the following sentence in the book, using this code

My Love for you is too deep for words

if you want to be extra tricky instead of circling the word you could write the page number, the line number, and the number of how many words in.

EXAMPLE:

Instead of circling the word on page 38, I could write 38,23,8 which would mean the 38th page, 23rd line down the 8th word in... which would be "LOVE"

LETTERS

Circle or underline letters in a paragraph. That make a secret note.

EXAMPLE:

"Teacher was planning a celebration for the last day of school before Christmas. All the families were invited to come at two o'clock and bring refreshments to share. "Don't worry, you can be home in time for milking." she said. The students would provide the entertainment."

-87, "JIP" Katherine Paterson

If you pick out the letters
ilovgyourhair

Which says...

I love your hair

If you want to be extra tricky you add a cipher

Use the cipher

A=B, B=C, C=D...

Pick out these letters
h kmud xmtq gzhq

After using the cipher it would say
I love your hair

BLACK OUT

This would be the hardest one of all.

Here you black out all the words and letters except the ones you want to be read. You wouldn't be able to skip around pages like in words, and doing letters might get confusing, but it would be a fun challenge for those who are looking for one ;)

It might more than a page to get a full sentence but I found a short EXAMPLE:

"She made him practice J-I-P on the borrowed slate and then W-E-S-T, since that was the name as Teacher had spelled it out. "You're lucky," she said."

-84, "JIP" Katherine Paterson

~~"She made him practice J-I-P on the borrowed slate and then W-E-S-T, since that was the name as Teacher had spelled it out. "You're lucky," she said."~~

Which leaves, I am Lucky

Here are three book marks with instructions, and three empty book marks to write your secret love note on. Print, cut out, and enjoy!
